Review of the Year - Clergy Report

2020 began optimistically and we were preparing to begin work around the mission and vision of St. John the Baptist, Foxham. However, as the effects of the coronavirus pandemic took hold, other priorities came to the fore. Despite the benefits of technology, which meant services and PCC meetings could continue (albeit in a different format), it was clear this would not be the best medium for the kind of discussion and interaction required to do justice to a mission action plan. In addition, the pandemic is revealing that necessary changes, not only in many areas of everyday life, but also the ways we worship and how we work out a model of sustainable ministry, are inevitable. We will therefore need to begin this work in earnest when circumstances allow. My hope is that our approach will be to seek the new opportunities which may now be open to us.

In terms of worship, 2020 has been incredibly challenging. As I have already mentioned, we have had the benefit of online services and while many of us are now conversant with Zoom and Teams, there are folk who do not have access to the internet. The lack of receiving bread and wine, and meeting in person has been deeply felt by so many. Weddings and baptisms have been postponed. There is much work to be done to reconnect with families and build up relationships (more opportunities). On the positive side, we have tried new ways of engaging the local community eg. Carols in the churchyard was very well received, and should give us confidence to be creative in the future.

Much of my time during 2020 has been taken up with getting to grips with legislation, Government and Church of England guidance, carrying out multiple risk assessments and learning how to use technology to keep everyone connected. There have also been many more telephone conversations to keep in touch with parishioners. Preparing and delivering services live and virtually across the Team is at once stimulating and exhausting, while planning for the future continues to be challenging. In addition, the financial impact of COVID has highlighted the need to consider our giving as a question of discipleship.

Having said all this, perhaps a consequence is that we will begin to focus on what is really important. Or should I say, who is really important? More than ever, how we stay connected, how we serve our community, how we notice those who are not in the centre of things, how we show the love of Christ, are the things we need to focus on.

Finally, I want to thank all of you who have been a huge support and encouragement to me and to each other throughout this extraordinarily difficult time. Whilst things will continue to be very testing for some time, I look forward with hope that things will not go back to the way they were, but will be so much better for everyone.
